In 1881, Friedrich August Kaulbach's painting Die Schutzenlies was exhibited at the Munich Oktoberfest. The title was derived from the shooting events (Schutzenfest) held throughout German. The girl who posed for it was a 21-year-old waitress named Coletta. Her image was immortalized on advertising signs, statues, and steins. An early postcard tells the story that The Blatz Brewing Company exhibited the 8 ft. x 5 1/2 ft. painting at the 1893 Chicago World's Fair. Coletta would continue to appear in Blatz advertising for many years to come.
