A block away from the Grand Place in Brussels, Belgium one can find the Mannekin Pis. Many years ago the son of a wealthy Brussels, Belgium resident was missing. Supposedly his father promised to build a statue of the boy as found. He was lost while walking through a nearby woods and when the search party found him, he was peeing against a tree.

The sculpture is a small statue of a little boy peeing. He's high up on his fountain pedestal and his smallness takes many visitors by surprise. This 1619 bronze statue replaced the original from 1388 which was lost. It was based on a model by Belgian sculptor Jerome Duquesnoy. Not far from the little boy is a museum which displays the 500 plus costumes that have been presented to the city over the years for dressing the boy. He is known by the people of Brussels as their oldest citizens.

On the following page are three groups of Mannekin Pis corkscrews for sale
